The English church people have inaugurated a Sunday school in connection with their services in Didsbury. The school started last Sunday with an initial attendance of 22, and will be continued every Sunday at 3.15 p.m.

The first kiln of bricks has been burnt at the brickyard and they have turned out a fine color. G.
Gwilt, the manager, stated that they had fifteen men employed on the works and expected to engage a few more as they had orders for brick that would keep them busy till the cold weather set in. Joe Parnell and W. Denham of Plymouth, England, practical brickmakers, arrived here last week and have accepted a position with the firm. Williams & Gwilt have also installed a first class gasoline pumping outfit in the yards.

It was sick less than 24 hours.

Miss Schmalback, Owen Sound,
Fred Theise, Port Elgin, and Joe Hyde, Paisley, were visitors at the residence of Mr. Roeth last week.

Work was commenced on the new block which is to be built next to Mowers' old store, this week. Matt. Ryckman has the contract.

The fine block of stores being erected by John Liesemer on Osler street is well under way and when completed will make a fine addition to Didsbury's business places.

Sunny Alberta has again come back to its own. The bright, warm weather of the last two weeks has again given the farmer
a chance to complete his harvest, for which he is very thankful.

A buckskin horse which was lying out on the prairie west of the town suffering from blood poisoning was shot Saturday.
The animal was examined by Dr.
McCreight and found to be past saving.

A much needed change has been made to the sidewalk leading up to the station platform on Osler street. The steps have been taken away and the sidewalk raised to a level with the platform which is much safer and more convenient than the old order of things.

FAMOUS JUDGE AND JESTER.

Wit of Scottish Bench Who Lived in Five Reigns.

The death is announced of Lord Young, who passed away in a private nursing home in the West End of London. His Lordship, who was in his 84th year, met with an accident when walking through the Youngs, and the shock hastened his end. The cause of death is certified as cerebral hemorrhage, and old age. His remains were removed to Edinburgh for interment. Born when George III. was still on the throne, the Right Hon. George Young—his title was purely honorary—lived in five reigns. He was still at Edinburgh University when Lord John Russell was fighting on behalf of his Reform Bill, and before Queen Victoria had been three years on the throne he was making a name at the Scottish Bar. For over 30 years he was a judge of the Court of Session, Edinburgh, retiring only two years ago, and his rare legal erudition was pleasantly associated with the salt of a ready wit. Before his nomination to the judgeship by Mr. Gladstone he made his mark in the House of Commons, where he represented the Wigton Burghs in the Liberal interest, and twice filled the office of Solicitor General to Scotland and Lord Advocate. It has been said of Lord Young that the gift of half a million to the Church of Scotland by the late Mr. James Baird, the ironmaster, was the "heaviest free insurance premium ever paid." He was staying at Dalmeir when news came that Lord Wolmer had been returned by three votes for West Edinburgh. The next arrival explained that the figures should have been 29, and that two Lords of Session, when he named, had voted for Lord Wolmer. "That accounts for the two extra votes," said Lord Young, going on as with the late Lord Dalmeir, when it was the custom to open the court with prayer. Lord Young remarked at luncheon afterwards: "Very long prayer that fellow gave me today. All I suppose it's quite right when Deas goes in circuit that the attention of the Almighty should be specially called to the fact." When one of the Lords Ordinary in the outer House of the Court of Session, Young was a somewhat heavy roll of business, partly owing to a vacancy on the Bench having been kept open longer than usual. One of his colleagues at the time was Lord Craighill, and the new judge, when at last he was appointed, took the title of Lord Craighill. On the appointment being announced Lord Young gratefully quoted the first two lines of the 121st Psalm:

A Heavy Premium.

Another of his sayings was that the gift of half a million to the Church of Scotland by the late Mr. James Baird, the ironmaster, was the "heaviest free insurance premium ever paid." He was staying at Dalmeir when news came that Lord Wolmer had been returned by three votes for West Edinburgh. The next arrival explained that the figures should have been 29, and that two Lords of Session, when he named, had voted for Lord Wolmer. "That accounts for the two extra votes," said Lord Young, going on as with the late Lord Dalmeir, when it was the custom to open the court with prayer. Lord Young remarked at luncheon afterwards: "Very long prayer that fellow gave me today. All I suppose it's quite right when Deas goes in circuit that the attention of the Almighty should be specially called to the fact." When one of the Lords Ordinary in the outer House of the Court of Session, Young was a somewhat heavy roll of business, partly owing to a vacancy on the Bench having been kept open longer than usual. One of his colleagues at the time was Lord Craighill, and the new judge, when at last he was appointed, took the title of Lord Craighill. On the appointment being announced Lord Young gratefully quoted the first two lines of the 121st Psalm:

I to the "hills," will lift mine eyes.

From whence dost come mine aid.
Lord Young's speeches and stories were always good. At the banquet which followed the ceremony of conferring upon him the freedom of Dundee, four years ago, he told the company a story about his father who in the old days owned some very fine apple trees.

Raid on Fruit.

There were many raids made upon the fruit, and Lord Young's father laid hold of a likely youth one day and offered him half-a-crown if he could give him as many as six apples. The boy accepted the money on the condition that when the culprit's name was disclosed he would not be punished. In telling this story Lord Young caused much merriment by turning to the Provost of the town, who was in the chair, and asking him what he did with the half-crown. His lordship was one of the last links with Robert Burns. He knew Jean Armour, Burns' widow, and frequently partook of hospitality in the house in which the poet had lived, and in which he died. His lordship also knew Burns' children, and the poet's grandfather, who lived with Jean Armour, frequently visited his father's house. Lord Young was one of the benchers of the Middle Temple, and though his visits were rare, he was one of the most popular of the Masters. He was the senior member of the Bench, excepting only the King, who from the time of his election when Prince of Wales of course took priority.

Overlooked the Side Issue.

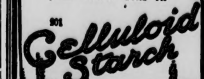

Andy Horn, who was once a "knee" proprietor of a large saloon at the east side, New York, was hiring as barkeeper a man since prominent in political life and who told the story with considerable glee.

"I'll give you $10 a month," said Andy.

"Ten dollars! A man can't live on that!"

"You forget the pickings," said Andy in serious earnest. "The barkeepers down here tell each other that my till is the easiest one to work in New York." "I took the job without further argument," says the ex-barkeeper.

It is much more useful in the higher latitudes, where rain is more subject to colds from exposure to the elements.

On one occasion a person entered Professor's study with a picture which he desired to sell. He nominated a "Birdseye View of Cambridge." ANOTHER CANUCK MAKES GOOD.

Dr. Miller Takes Up Important Appointment in the States.

Dr. E. W. Miller, who has just taken up his duties as psychopathologist at the Cook County Institution at Dunning (Chicago), Ill., is a young Canadian who has quite a name for himself in the United States. The case of Dr. Miller may be cited as an example in illustrating the success of civil service reform has been carried on in the Republic during the last few years. Young he first offered himself as a candidate as an assistant in an institution for the insane in Massachusetts, although he had been assured that merit alone would be considered in making the appointment. He was naturally had misgivings that an alien without influence, and in view of the general impression regarding the preference of natives in filling offices in the States, that he would be discriminated against. But the result of his application proved a pleasant surprise to himself and his friends. There were three places to be filled out of the numerous candidates who wrote on the examination only two came up to the standard of the examination. One was a Canadian—Dr. Miller himself—and the other a Scotchman from Glasgow—who had high marks.

Since that time Dr. Miller has become quite widely known by the medical profession in the United States as an authority on the pathological treatment of insanity. He secured his present position entirely on his merits. Of the ninety candidates for the place he was the highest showing on examination, and was promptly offered the appointment.

There has been in the United States lately a great awakening to the need of more scientific and rational treatment of insanity as a mental disease, possible of prevention, amelioration and cure. We in Canada are far behind our neighbors in this regard. Fortunately, through a Canadian, Dr. Miller would not, under present conditions in Ontario at least, stand much chance of being given the opportunity to turn his talents to the service of his native country, his family being strong Liberals. It is understood that had he been a Conservative he would probably have been secured by the Ontario Government to improve methods of treating the insane in this province. It is said, indeed, that one member of the Cabinet was very desirous of securing him for this work. But although the doctor would have willingly remained here at a smaller salary than he is receiving in Chicago, such an arrangement was a political impossibility. Dr. Miller is a son of Mr. C. J. Miller, ex-Mayor of Oshawa, Ont. He graduated in medicine at the University of Toronto in 1896—Saturday Night.

Congential Employment.

The high prize of life, the crowning fortune of man, is to be born to some pursuit which finds him in employment and happiness, whether it be to make baskets or to know of canals or statues or songs.—Emerson.

Wife for the Rest.

"William, who was ever shipped at school?" queried the visitor.
"Only by the teacher," was the rather significant reply.

Use For Groups of Soap.
A good way of saving soap is to add them to the household cleaning mixture. This is useful in every household for cleaning paint, removing grease from clothes and all other occasions when a good cleaning preparation is needed. Keep a wide mouthed bottle and into it throw all odds and ends of soap. When you have a small collection of these, add a teaspoonful of powdered saltpetre, 1/2 lb. of rock ammonia and about a quart of warm, soft water. The mixture is colored. Leave the mixture till it is cooled. A little of this may be dissolved in water or on a funnel and will be found an invaluable cleanser.

THE RECORD TRIANGULAR FURNACE

Is fitted with the improved Record Triangular Grate—the most perfect furnace grate on the market. Of the four triangular grate bars, each bar is operated by the use of a handle applied to either of the two centre bars. To remove this handle after shaking is impossible until the grate has been returned to its original position, flat and in place, without any of the cogs sticking up. The result is that the bars are always flat under the fire and that it is impossible for lumps of coal to drop through and be wasted. The Record Triangular Grate can be entirely removed from without without lying on stomach or bothering with a light.

SUPPLEMENT TO DIDSBURY PIONEER

AROUND THE TOWN

A satisfactory quantity of poultry was received at the government fattening station at the Didsbury creamery on Monday—considering this was the first delivery and the industry a brand new one. F. Hunter has charge of the work. Watch the PIONEER for date of next delivery.

Mr. G. Peter Liesemer, who farms a half section east of Didsbury, was in town on Friday. He states that he had 170 acres under crop this season none of which was touched by frost. The snow did no damage to his grain, consequently cutting is easy and the yield is heavier than in 1906.

Rev. J. S. Shortt, M.A., brother of Prof. Shortt of Queen's University, Kingston, will preach on Sunday in the Presbyterian church at 7.30 p.m. Mr. Shortt is to be inducted into the pastorate of Daysland church on Tuesday. Rev. Ferguson will preach at Daysland on Sunday and take part in the induction service there on Tuesday.

H. J. Tully who, with D. Siebert and Oscar Levagood went to the Yellowhead Pass, returned on Sunday night. He reports that they got into the pass but the horses playing out he thought he had better return. Levagood and Siebert intend staying up in that country to fish and trap all winter. He reports that there is some good country up there but that it will need a lot of clearing.

Dry, cracked and colorless lips mean feverishness, and are as well ill appearing. To have beautiful, pink, velvet-like lips, apply at bedtime a coating of Dr. Shoop's Green Salve. It will soften and heal any skin ailment. Get a free trial box, at our store, and be convinced. Large nickel capped glass jars, 25 cents.

Mr. Gilmore, of London, Ont., paid a short visit to his son, J. A. Gilmore the baker this week. Mr. Gilmore, who has been visiting in England and Ireland for some months and came out to the west almost direct from those countries saw a big contrast in the settlement of the country and is well pleased with what he had seen while out here.

W. J. Jackson
Osler Street DIDSBURY

Want Didsbury Milk.

We understand negotiations are under way with a number of farmers in the vicinity of Didsbury for the sale of their milk to a company in Calgary. The price offered is 17½ cents per gallon, milk to be delivered at Didsbury each evening to go south on the 9.43 express, and the farmer to pay express charges. Contracts to hold for six months. Before entering in to the milk-shipping business the townspeople of Didsbury would like to have the farmers do a little thinking.

As milk weighs approximately ten pounds to the gallon it would require 10 gallons to produce 100 pounds of milk which selling at 17½ cents a gallon would yield the farmer $1.75 per hundred pounds of milk. The express rate to Calgary is 80 cents per hundred pounds, consequently deducting shipping charges (80 cents) from the selling price ($1.75) the farmer actually receives 95 cents per 100 pounds of milk.

As we understand it the average milk in Alberta tests 4 per cent. of butter fat to 100 pounds of milk. By special investigation we also learned that the Cloverhill Creamery paid for the seven months of the past fall and winter as follows: October 22.68c., November 24.36c., December 24c., January 24.61c., February 23.46c., March 24.7c., April 23.5c. per pound for butter fat. With the promising advance in price of butter on account of the shortage of supply the creamery can easily pay an average of 25 cents per pound (and likely more) for butter fat through the coming winter. Thus patrons would receive $1 for the fat of the same quantity of milk for which they receive 95 cents by shipping to Calgary. By patronizing the creamery farmers have their skim milk at home and the privilege of taking the buttermilk home to feed hogs, which everyone knows is worth considering.

Also, they would have to deliver the cream once a week to the creamery in the daytime, instead of every night to the depot and, besides, await its being put on board the train no matter how late it may be in arriving.

By dealing with the creamery they will also be patronizing home industry—a concern which pays taxes to make improvements which every farmer appreciates when coming to town. Think the matter over again Mr. Farmer and you'll surely come to the conclusion that there's more money and comfort to be had in sticking to the creamery.

BUSINESS MAN

MARRIED

Mr. Clifford Thomas Cline and Miss Lavina Herring, youngest daughter of Edmond John and Lavina Herring, both of Noelson, Alta., were married at Rev. C. G. Kaatz at the Evangelical Parsonage, Didsbury, at noon on Tuesday, September 24th, 1907. Albert Herring, Norman Cline and Miss Pearl Herring were present at the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Cline took the 3.15 train for a wedding tour to Banff and other western points. On their return they will be at home on Mr. Cline's homestead about thirty miles southeast of Didsbury. All their friends and acquaintances wishing them much success in their future life.

Sabbath Our Heritage.

On Friday evening a highly appreciative audience gathered in the Evangelical church to hear Rev. J. G. Shoop, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance of Canada, give an instructive address on that phase of work.

Rev. Mr. Shoop occupied the chair and introduced the lecturer in a few brief sentences, after which that gentleman gave an inspiring speech on "The Sabbath Our Heritage."

The lecturer in his opening remarks referred to the material heritage which the Canadian possessed; to the wealth of their mountain forests, their excellent fisheries, and their rich mineral deposits. These products promised a great future for the Dominion. But these products implied peril. The industrial life of the nation was at stake. Manhood was sold for money; womanhood that coal; but character more than all. But how could we retain these if we gave away our God-given heritage—the Sabbath. Without the Sabbath there could be no true manhood, no true womanhood.

The Canadian people were to live by the proper observance of the Sabbath, but the Canadians were not the only people who were alive to the benefits accruing from the Sabbath rest. Idaho, one of the states over the line, had felt her need of a Sabbath where in rest; also three other countries representing three different continents—Argentina in America, France in Europe, and China in Asia.

France had 150 years ago tried to improve on the divine law of one day's rest in seven by giving one ten and that to be a holiday.

ANNOUNCEMENT

VOIGT, Didsbury.

How had the pleasure Sunday worked out in the history of that nation? Why, she had lived to see her mistake, hence in the year 1900 the men of France desired to make the Sabbath a day of rest, and in addition restore it to its usual place in the calendar. When the measure was brought before the Chamber of Deputies so popular was it that it passed with a majority of 175, only one voting against it. Whatever else the passing of that measure might mean to France it certainly implied that France believed the Sabbath should be a day of rest. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, recently returned from France, had contrasted the peaceful Sabbath as enjoyed by the Canadians from that of pleasure and sport as enjoyed in France, much to the credit of the Dominion.

The Lord's Day Alliance were accused with being too extreme in their views hence a nationalistic party had formed itself in Toronto to advocate the selling of tobacco and newspapers on the Lord's day. But the advocacy of such a measure was to be condoned. Why? Simply because it compelled men and boys to stand behind counters and parade streets, hence they were deprived of their day of rest. For what cause? Only to maintain a selfish gratification. If a man wanted to smoke cigars and read news from Sunday (as he might be doing something better on that holy day) let him purchase them on Saturday night. Surely they (the ladies) might learn a lesson from the ladies on this line. Who would dream of a lady adventuring the keeping open of the grocery store on Sunday. But man is more inconsistent, more selfish, more worldly in his desires and indulgences.

Still continuing on this line he showed how laxly in regard to the Sabbath was determined the vitality of the church. Deplete the church and you materialize the nation and that must be the inevitable result if you give up the Sabbath. Owing to the moral and physical degeneration of so many men which were at stake we must exercise every effort to preserve its sanctity.

His second point was "The need to hold the Sabbath as our heritage." This was imperative for grave perils were at work undermining her foundations. Whilst infidelity and immorality were aggressive and antagonistic to a proper regard for the Lord's day, yet apart from these were two outstanding forces, namely, the greed of money and the greed of selfishness. The greed for money was shown in the methods of our great corporations and railways. Why did they work their men seven days in the week? Was it for the benefit of the public or the benefit of the capitalists? We were compelled to pay for the benefit of the purse. When speaking in a certain town on the prairie he asked the question, "Who rules this country?" Immediately the answer was supplied by a voice in the rear of the building saying, "The C.P.R. is the C.P.R. is a mighty factor in the life of this nation, having a great influence, yet even they are compelled to conform themselves to law as the passing of the recent Lord's Day Act had proven.

The moral selfishness of men in desiring pleasure and sport for the Sabbath was a thing to be deeply regretted. Whilst our friends over the border were stigmatized as Sabbath-breakers (and undoubtedly they deserved it) that same lawlessness was equally characteristic of the Canadian but in a more cunning and hypocritical form. To demonstrate this truth the tactics of certain drugstores in Toronto were quoted who in order to pander to the tastes of the fashionable set that promulgated the streets of that city on Sunday afternoon were selling ice cream and sodas for medicinal purposes. To ensure them against the law they had their stores placarded to that effect. It was an artful dodge but did not work for an epidemic which was apparent only on Sunday afternoon and the only cure for which was ice cream and sodas, the same not being recognized as poisoning, medicinal properties on the other six days of the week was certainly a tonic to produce matter for comment.

Could we condone this wild care for pleasure and self gratification too much—a gratification which in order to indulge itself compelled in Canada 150,000, and in the States 4,000,000 of men to be deprived of their day of rest. Shall we cease to fight when we see the need of preserving our heritage? The third point upon which emphasis was laid referred to the "holding of the Sabbath." "It could be held," emphasized the speaker. For that end the Lord's Day Alliance organized ten years ago. That organization had given great impetus to the Lord's day question. Since it had come into being it had succeeded in its efforts and now their monthly paper The Lord's Day Advocate had a circulation of 50,000. Their methods of service were by preaching, lecturing and literature; by organization, having at the present time over ten branches scattered throughout the Dominion, and by legislation.

They had secured great respect for the Lord's Day. Speaking of the Lord's Day Act it was not a perfect one but it was commendable, but it was commendable, and one that was welcome for since it came into force 75,000 out of 150,000 Sunday workmen had given back their day of rest; in addition over 100,000 copies of American magazines and newspapers had been put out of circulation in Canada. More a great impetus had been given to the Lord's Day. The Lord's Day Alliance was an asset that corporations and railway companies were learning to respect. The Canadian people were to live by the proper observance of the Sabbath, but the Canadians were not the only people who were alive to the benefits accruing from the Sabbath rest. Idaho, one of the states over the line, had felt her need of a Sabbath where in rest; also three other countries representing three different continents—Argentina in America, France in Europe, and China in Asia.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

"DID you hear the cock crow? By the beard of my father, I'd forgotten you and myself everything but the story. It's near morning, and I've a weary tongue. Another look and one more pipe. Then, sir, I'll let you go. I'm near the end."

"Let me see. It's a winter day in New York city after four years. The streets are crowded. Here are men and women, but I see only the horses. You know, sir, how I love them. Well, here is a big stable. A tall man has halted by its open door and addressed the manager."

"I learn that you have a bay mare with starred face and a white stocking. It is Trove who speaks."

"The mare is a rack of bones, limping, very sore. But her foot fits. She follows. Her driver leans her over the head. Trove is running toward her. He climbs a front wheel, and down comes the driver, in a minute Trove has her by the bit. He calls her by name—Phyllis! The slim ears begin to move. She nickers. Good, sir, she is trying to see him. One eye is bleeding, the other blind. He turns to round her neck, sir, and he hides his face in her mane. That mare you ride—she is the granddaughter of Phyllis. I'd as soon think of selling my father. Really, sir, Darrel was right. God'll mind the look of your horses."

So spoke an old man sitting in the freight.

"Trove went home with the mare," he continued. "She recovered the sight of one eye and had a box stall and the brook pasture—you know, that by the beech grove. He got home the day before Christmas. Polly met him at the depot, a chairman of the board, a child of three was with her, a little girl, dark eyes and flaxen curly hair. You remember Phyllis? Eyes like her mother's."

"I was there at the depot that day. Well, it looked as if they were still in their honeymoon."

"Dear little wife," said Trove as he kissed Polly. Then he took the child in his arms, and he went to dinner with them. They lived half a mile or so out of Hillsborough."

"Hello!" said Trove as we entered. "Here's a merry Christmas."

"Polly had trimmed the tree. There against the wall was a tapering fir tree, hung with tinsel and popcorn. All around the room were green branches of holly and hollyhocks."

"I'm glad you found Phyllis," said she.

"Poor Phyllis! he answered. "They broke her down with hard work and sold her. She'll be home tomorrow."

"You saw Darrel on the way?"

"Yes, and he is the same miracle of happiness. I think he will soon be free. Leblanc is there in prison, convicted of a crime in Whitehall. As I expected, there is a red mark on the back of his left hand. Day after tomorrow he goes again to Dannemoor. Sweetheart, I hurried home to see you."

"Night came, dark and stormy, with snow in the west wind. They were sitting there by the Christmas tree, all bright with candle-light. Trove and the little child. They were talking of old times. They heard a rap at the door. Trove flung it open. He spoke a word of surprise. There was the old Santa Claus of white beard and word, sir, the very one. He entered, shaking his great coat, his beard full of snow. He let down his sack there by the lighted tree. He beckoned to the little child."

"Go and see him. It is old Santa Claus," said Polly, her voice trembling as she led the child to the door. "Then quickly she took the hand of her husband."

"He is your father, she whispered. "A moment they stood with hands full looking at Santa Claus and the child. That little one had her arms around a knee and, dumb with great wonder, gazed at it. Trove was a timid appeal in her sweet face."

"The man did not move. He was looking down at the child. In a moment she began to prattle and to laugh. They saw his knees bend a bit. Ah, sir, it seemed as if the baby were pulling him down. He quickly pushed the child away. They heard a little cry, a kind of a wailing 'Oh-o-o,' like that you hear in the chimney. Then, sir, down he went in his tracks, a quivering little heap, and lay there at the foot of the tree. Polly and Trove were bending over him. Cap and wig had fallen from his head. He was so small and so young."

"Father! Trove whispered, touching the long white hair. 'Oh, my father, speak to me! Let me—let me see your face!'"

"Trove—slowly the old man rose. Trove helping him, and put on his cap. Then, sir, he took a step back and stood straight as a king. He waved them away with his hand."

"'Nay, boy, remember,' he whispered. 'We were to let him pass.' And then he started for the door."

"Trove went before him and stood against it."

"'Hear me, boy; 'tis better that ye let him sleep until the trumpet calls an' ye both stand with all the quick as the dead!'"

"'No, I have waited long, and I love—' I love him," Trove answered. "Those fair young people knelt beside it—old man, clinging to his hands. 'The good saint was crying. 'I come not here to bring shame,' said he presently."

"'We honor and with all our souls we love you,' Trove answered."

"'Who shall stand before it?' said the old man. 'Behold—behold how love hath raised the dead!' He flung off his cap and bowed."

"'If ye will have it so, know ye that I, Roderick Darrel, an' thy father.'"

"Now, sir, you may go. I wish you merry Christmas," said that old man of the hills."

But the other tarried, thoughtfully pulling his pipe."

"And the father was not dead?"

"'Was only the living dead,'" said the old man, now lighting a lantern."

"You know that grave in a poem of Sidney Trove."

"It has neither nod nor stone. It has neither dust nor bone."

He planned to be as one dead to the world."

He looked at the old man sitting in the freight.

"Oh, my father, speak to me!"

"And the other man of mystery, 'Who was he?'"

"Some child of misfortune. He was befriended by the tinker and did errands for him."

"He took the money to Trove that night the latter slept in the woods?"

"Yes, for years it lay under the bed of Darrel. By and by he put the money in a savings bank, all but a few dollars."

"And why did he wait so long before returning it?"

"He tried to be rid of the money, but was unable to find Thompson. And Trove, he lived to repay every dollar. Ah, sir, he was a man of a thousand."

"That story of Darrel's in the little shop—I see it was fact in a setting of fiction."

"That's all it pretended to be, the old man of the hills."

"He was more queer," said the other. He was now mounted. "I know Darrel went to prison for the sake of the boy, but did none one set him free?"

"His own character. Leblanc came to love him, like the other prisoners, and, sir, he confessed. I declare, it's daylight now, and here I am with the lantern! Goodly, and merry Christmas!"

"THE END."

MUSIC WITHOUT SOUND.

The fundamental evil in music is the necessity of reproduction of its artistic creations by performance. There it is as easy to learn to read music as words the sonatas of Beethoven would have the popularity of the poems of Schiller.—F. Hiller.

Beautiful Harmony.

"I like to see things harmonious." "I like to see things that are right. You have a rubber neck and an elastic conscience."

TRAVELING IN EUROPE.

What It Means to Ride Second Class on the Railroads.

A detour of the guidebooks is the advice to ride second class on the railroads of Europe. It is often pointed out that first class and second class are frequently but divisions of the same car, and this makes a great impression on the inexperienced tourist, particularly if his purse is limited. Landing at Plymouth, Southampton, Havre, Cherbourg, Liverpool, he is at once conveyed to London or Paris on "steamer" trains under the same excellent conditions that have prevailed on your trip, but thereafter you are at your own resources, and if you are wise you will not only travel first class, but you will see to it that your seat is always engaged well ahead. If you travel second class between cities that correspond to New York and Philadelphia, say where intercourse is frequent and numerous, you will most likely have to stand up in all second class compartments. To get a second class seat between Vienna and Budapest, for example, is about like boarding a train for Coney Island at Brooklyn bridge on a summer Sunday afternoon, and if you do get a seat somebody else sandwiches and sandwiches on your lap.

Another point to be remembered is that in Europe you must always occupy a whole sleeping compartment for yourself, as you can here. You have to show a ticket for each berth. Usually he who occupies the person traveling alone at night to seek out before arranging the trip some suitable companion or the partner of one or five any odds number to make similar provisions.

A BATTLE FOR A HAT.

And How the Victor in the Struggle Lost the Trophy.

Verdi had stepped from an incoming train in Genoa some at a time when the Italian premier, the Italian premier, was in the station. The marquis recognized the musician and requested a station master to introduce him.

He greeted Verdi warmly, congratulated him on his fine health and wished him many more years of life.

Verdi took the station buffet and returning to his train forgot his hat. This was an opportunity not to be lost by the musician, and he and his friends simultaneously sprung for the hat. Both reached it at once, so that one side of the hat was in the hands of the other.

A lively contest ensued, and the two swayed backward and forward in their desire to retain the treasure. The lady came off victorious. "Ah!" she exclaimed triumphantly. "Now I've got it, and I intend to keep it!"

Her surprise was only equaled by his dismay when a gentleman who had been watching the conflict for some time stepped forward with the remark: "But this is my hat!" A loud laugh rang out from the onlookers, a laugh in which even the combatants were forced to join.

The lady changed her hands, and the lady chanced to be a woman of two later she saw the trap into which she had fallen. The hat was the great prize, and the stranger had secured it by an unjustifiable ruse.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

If you can smile when your rival is puffed, you have tact.

There is always a demand for the man who does his best.

As a rule, other people are the best judges of your importance.

Our opinions are like our veins—more appreciated when not forced upon people.

Drifting with the tide is a slow way to get anywhere; the tide flows both ways.

The aggressive man is usually only a polite way of referring to your quarrelsome friend.

Don't air your family skeleton. People know enough about it when it is kept locked in the closet.

The most aggravating kind of a person to live in the house with is one who always has his own way and yet goes around with an abused air.

Schopenhauer on Anonymity.

Anonymity is the refuge for all literary and journalistic mediocrity. It is the practice of the writer who is completely stopped. Every article, even in a newspaper, should be accompanied by the name of its author. The editor should be made strictly responsible for the accuracy of the signature. The freedom of the press should be thus far restricted, that when a man publishes a proclamation through the far sounding trumpet of the newspaper he should be answerable for, at any rate with his honor, if he has any, and then all upon people who are walking about without any disguise—this is not the part of a gentleman! It is the part of a scoundrel and a knave.

KING AS PUBLIC SPEAKER.

His Majesty's Speeches Terms and Conditions—His Own Devising.

One or two recent speeches made by King Edward, based on the occasion of his meeting the King of Spain at Caracaras, recalls the fact that our Sovereign is a particularly clear and accessible public speaker. It is not generally known that he received his first lessons in eloquence when he was quite a little boy from a Mr. George Barclay, a well-known actor of that day. Mr. Barclay was engaged to give readings at Buckingham Palace from the "Antigone" and the "Oedipus" trilogy; his royal pupil certainly profited by his instruction. Later on, he used, with his brothers and sisters, to give little theatrical performances, in which the future King always spoke his "lines" with grace and distinction.

The King's First Speech.

King Edward's first public speech was delivered when he was seventeen. It was the occasion of his presenting new colors at Burnside Camp to the 100th (Prince of Wales's) Royal Canadian Regiment, which had done gallant service in the Crimean War.

It was a charming little address, in which the young Prince most aptly alluded to his "youth and inexperience."

An eye-witness records that he spoke in clear and distinct tones, with proper emphasis, and without hesitation or timidity. But his speech was so short and so simple that he suddenly to lose the thread of his argument and came to a dead stop.

This speech was repeated at the Royal Academy banquet more than forty years ago, but his admirable good sense was retained, and he remained hard until he had recovered the speech. After he had finished his speech, he was asked to repeat it.

He turned to Sir Charles Eastlake, the then president of the Royal Academy, and he was quite proud of himself. "I knew it quite by heart this morning," he declared.

His Majesty's Own Devising.

It is sometimes, but erroneously, declared that royal personages have their speeches written for them. Of course, they are not allowed to use King's Speech in opposing Parliament. It is his Majesty's own composition; it is well known that he has written his Ministers for the time being, and in the King's English is often faultless.

PRICE OF A LIFE.

Willing Murderers Plenty in the Storms of London.

I am told that a ten pound note will buy a man's life in London—that any unscrupulous person can fall into the Thames on a dark night or break his neck going round a slippery dark corner or fall under a van if a little bit of crisp paper changes hands, says a London writer.

I know that a very distinguished playwright, wishing to work out the plot of a melodrama, went into a high class den of thieves, made friends with some of the leaders and unfolded to them as something he wished to put into execution the plan he had devised for his villain's action.

He told his listeners that there was a very important character he wanted out of the way for forty-eight hours while he played the very dickens on the Stock Exchange with the stocks the finances controlled. He suggested to his listeners that an attractive lady and a yacht would be the simplest means of insuring this object.

His hearers concurred. They knew they were very yacht for the purpose. A skipper was engaged, and the yacht was chartered. The lady was secured, and concerning the lady there would be no difficulty whatever.

After the forty-eight hours, however, will of course be the same. The dramatist finally, thinking of his fourth act.

He thought some over the faces of his audience. "Well, anyhow, of course, if you wish it, but it would save such a lot of questions being asked if the spokesman was the 'overboard,' the joke-man suggested."

THE WHITE LADY.

Warning Death Phantom of the Reigning House of Prussia.

On the night before the battle of Rainfeld Prince Louis of Prussia and his adjutant, Count Nostitz, were chatting in the Schloss Bellevue, Berlin, doleful. The prince was anticipating victory when he suddenly turned pale and rushed from the room, pursuing through the corridors a shadowy white robed figure. The sentinel saw it also.

The white lady Nostitz and the prince saw the white lady on a hill ringing her hands in despair as the Germans felt back. A few minutes later Louis was killed and Nostitz wounded. Nostitz told the story to his son, and the son to Kaiser Fritz.

The white lady's first appearance was seen on the night of the battle at Rainfeld in 1866. She appeared eight or ten times in the next century. Provincial Happenings Olds fair has been postponed until Oct. 7th and 8th.

314,350 bushels of grain were threshed in Red Deer district last fall.

Five different denominations now hold service in Camrose each Sunday.

H. H. Fisher, a Leduc jeweler, has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors.

Toronto University will confer the honorary degree of LL.D. on Premier Rutherford this week.

The Conjuring Creek Creamery, Leduc, is almost complete but will not be operated this season.

There will be a convention of Strathcona constituency Conservatives at Wetaskiwin on Oct. 8th.

W. Hillborn of Amherst succeeds H. L. Edmonds as manager of the Innisfail branch of the Bank of Commerce.

Edmonton presbytery has also been divided with Lamont as the boundary line. The new presbytery will be known as the Vermilion.

The creamery eighteen miles east of Carstairs will close at the end of September. The weekly output this month was 700 pounds.

Harold Driscoll of Carstairs has gone to New York for a special course in pen and pencil sketching at which he has shown considerable ability.

Over 5000 acres were under grain crop at Great Slave Lake this year. Harvest at that point and also at Peace River was completed by Sept. 15.

Chas. Kurtz of Regina has the distinction of being the youngest prisoner in Edmonton jail. He is fourteen years old and is serving a two year term for theft.

Preston Lynch, who lives with his brother on the old McDougall ranch across the Red Deer at Olds, committed suicide on Wednesday last. He shot himself through the breast.

HONESTLY

'Tis remarkable the difference we've noticed in Cash Sales since cutting down the credit to a limit and inducing people to buy for Cash by giving a liberal DISCOUNT. . . .

It's Not a Rush Sale

but merely giving you a Discount of 15 per cent. on all Fancy and Staple Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes, and 20 per cent. off Clothing. Where can anyone make money faster. Where can anyone make money faster?
Why it's honestly better than real estate
